Mrs. Mann and her guests have recently been to Williamsburg with Judge and Mrs. George L. Christian and Miss Melf-coance last evening at the Christian for several days.

Mrs. William Hodges Mann and her guests at the Executive Mansion, Mrs. Harriet Woodrow Welles, of Denver, Col., and Miss Flora Miller, of Lexington, spent yesterday with relatives in Petersburg. Mrs. Mann and her guests have recently been to Williamsburg with Judge and Mrs. George L. Christian for several days.

Mrs. William Hodges Mann and her marriage was a fashionable event for the Dries of the England of the great world, either in England of in Italy, though the general public has been ignorant thereof. At the same ignorant thereof. At the same been ignorant thereof. At the same ignorant thereof. At the same ignorant thereof to in Italy, though the general public has been ignorant thereof. At the same ignorant thereof. At in Tripoli. These charges, in spite of their extravagance, excited widespread mit suicide.

Her case is an exceedingly difficult during this session of the conference, attention among those ignorant of her mental condition, by reason of the fact that her two married daughters, Dona Isabella Chigi, and Dona Victoria Caetani, Princess of Teano, together with Princess Helen of Italy, Duchess of Aosta, were serving as Red Caetan and Dona Victoria Caetani, Princess Helen of Italy, Duchess of Aosta, were serving as Red Caetan and Dona Cross nurses in the ambulances at years at Bordentown, N. J. The marquis made no concealment that his reign is drawing to a close, of the fact that he had lost his heart his physicians can do but little to proto Princess Teresa, who was renowned for her beauty. No one has ever ven-tured to hint that there was anything questionable in the young man's admiration. But her husband, fearing that the marquis's attentions might give rise to unpleasant comment, requested him, in the most courteous duested him, in the most courteous fashion and for the princess's sake, to abstain, at any rate for a time, from visiting the Colonna Palace.

On receiving this communication, young Roccagiovine, altogether beside himself at the idea that he could pos-sibly have compromised the fair name of the object of his adoration, blew out his brains, leaving a note asking that his favorite scarf-pin, a jeweled but-terfly pierced through the heart by a ruby-headed pin, should be presented in ruby-headed pin, should be presented in his name to the princess.

The tragedy created a tremendous sensation at Rome. It wrecked the mind of the princess, who, upon a partial return to lucidity, developed so pronounced an aversion for her husband that she refused to speak to or remain with him or even to hear his remain with him, or even to bear his name. She took up her residence in England, under the wing of her mother, who died a few years ago as the wife of Lord Walsingham, having buried in turn her second husband, the Italian Duke of San Teodoro, and her first husband, Lord Burghersh, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Westmoreland. Lady Walsingham herself was of somewhat romantic origin, having been born several months after the death of her father, the "gallant and immortal Locke," of whom Lord Lytton writes in his "Ernest Maltravers," and who, having made a runaway match with a sister of Lord Tollemache, was drowned in an open boat under the very eyes of his bride during their honeymoon in Italy.

The princess's husband, the late Don

He declined to secure a judicial separation, and al-though she was rich in her own right, through her father, the Italian Duke of San Teodoro, he made a point of surrounding her in England with every luxury and comfort. She had her country seat and her town house in London, and he kept her daughters, who had remained with him, in constant intercourse with her.

Gradually she appeared to have re-covered her health and her reason, and to have become sensible to the devoto have become sensible to the devo-tion of her husband. She announced her intention of returning to Rome to resume her place at the head of his household at Rome, and also his name; for while in England, she had insisted on being described by her father; title that is to say as Duckess father's title, that is to say, as Duchess of San Teodoro.

The fact that the report of the committee on Sabbath observance was pre-sented and adopted to-day as was report No. 7 of the committee on publishing interests, and the further fact that the matter of the granting of the rights of the lalty to the women of the church has been disposed of, so far as this session of the conference is concerned, reduces considerably the work of the remaining days of the question of granting to the women of the church equal rights with the laity was prevented by the decision to defer the matter until the session of the conference, one year hence, and then to bring it up as a memorial to the general conference. J. B. Henry presented the paper to-day which favored granting the rights of the laity to the women, and which requested that the matter be referred to a committee composed of three mem-members of the conference, this committee to report during this session. F. J. Prettyman presented a sub-stitute to the paper, in which the women of the church were assured of the appreciation of the church of their work and interest, but which recommended that the relation they now sustain to the church is more satisfactory than would be that recommended in the original paper.

Before action was taken on the substitute, H. M. Hamill requested that Bishop Kilgo then made reference to what is known as "liberal theology," and said: "Liberal theology is no recognition of God's liberty, but is just the opposite."

Speaking further of the freedom of the Holy Spirit, Bishop Kilgo said: "Some men in our church are afraid to have the Holy Spirit come along for fear He will make them do something to have the Holy Spirit come along for fear He will make them do something the Presbyterians will not like and that the papers will write about. I want the Holy Spirit to come among us as often as He will and with His own administration. I have no criticism of His administration in the life of others, and I resent any criticism of His administration in my life.

This evening the anniversary of the conference Board of Missions was held. The first thought in the lesson which he emphasized was that conship does not exist outside of Jesus Christ, and there is no sonship in nature. He showed that the relation of Jesus Christ to God establishes the fatherhood of God and the sonship of Jesus Christ and of all who come to God through Him. He called attention next to the sovereignty of God's freedom, and showed that freedom asserts itself not only in religious form, but in political form also.
